H.U.C. Head Warns Against Any Church-State Union As Persecution Source

Dr. Nelson Glueck, head of the Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion speaking at a conference on religion and public education arranged by the Central Conference of American Rabbis, and attended by 200 persons at the college-institute, 40 West Sixty-eighth Street, in New York, warned that any union between church and state, no matter how remote, would ultimately bring about the persecution of non-conforming religious minorities. He declared that even state recognition of all religions discriminated against its non-theistic citizens.

"Millions of innocent human beings, men, women and children, died during the Thirty Years War because of the attempt of Catholicism and Protestantism to destroy one another and create a state in which only one religion would be recognized," Dr. Glueck said.

Direct or indirect financial support of religious schools, he went on, can only weaken or possibly destroy the American public school pupil, reports the New York Times. He criticized sectarian groups that "attempt to use the public schools as a club to beat down more vigorous or aggressive religious rivals."

"One of the prime tasks of religion is to maintain the supremacy and dignity of the individual against the encroachments of the state," he declared. "The church that defers to the state must inevitably lose its soul, and the state that is dominated by the church is no longer sovereign."

Three representatives of the Jewish, Catholic and Protestant faiths spoke in a discussion on the public schools. They were Dr. Bernard J. Bamberger, former president of the Synagogue Council of America; Prof. James M. O'Neill of Brooklyn College, author of the recent "Catholicism and American Freedom," and Dr. P. Ernest Johnson, research director of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U. S. A.

Dr. O'Neill and Dr. Johnson agreed in favor of released time programs for schools, although the latter opposed formal religious teaching in public schools. Dr. O'Neill held that religious classes in public schools were all right if allowed by state constitutions and if the bulk of the citizens in a community desired it.

Declaring that "you can't give religious training at public expense," Dr. Johnson nevertheless criticized "the negative indoctrination found in too many public institutions." He said some were violating the Constitution by "advocating the teaching of democracy as an all-sufficient religion."

Dr. Bamberger opposed the teaching of formal religion in public schools, "even on a supposedly non-sectarian basis." He contended that religion could not be taught on a sectarian basis in the churches, homes and religious schools. He advocated, for a better moral tone in the public schools, better working conditions for teachers.

Dr. O'Neill took issues with the recent attack by Dr. James E. Coon, president of Harvard, on non-public schools as a threat to democracy, says the New York Times.

Presiding over the discussion was Dr. Philip S. Bernstein, president of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, who hailed it as a step toward breaking down the barriers between groups. He said interfaith relationships had deteriorated in the last quarter century and "given way to name-calling and lack of cooperation." (Continued on Page Fourteen)

U.N. Scientists In Israel Discuss How To Transform Deserts

A symposium on desert research, sponsored by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, was held in Jerusalem with fifty scientists from twelve countries on hand.

After welcoming addresses in the name of President Chaim Weizmann and by Prime Minister David Ben-Gurion, the delegates and nearly 1,000 visitors in the auditorium heard Prof. Walter Clay Lowdermilk warn that "extinction will overtake the race of man no less than it overtook the race of dinosaurs" if science and international cooperation were not used in meeting the needs of the rapidly increasing population of the world.

Professor Lowdermilk is in Israel as a consultant of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization advising Israel on soil conservation.

"Having inspected the wasteful and inconsiderate use of the soil of much of the lands of this earth, I see few guarantees so far that man will exercise the intelligence with which he is endowed by his creator sufficiently to establish an enduring civilization upon this planet," he declared. "But there is still a chance."

Professor Lowdermilk told the conference the problem was not so much one of conquest of natural deserts as of reconquest of man-made deserts that have resulted from neglect and misuse, says the New York Times.

The scientists took a field trip to the Negev desert area to inspect both the ruins of ancient civilization and the irrigation works and development begun by the Israelis. The scientists were received by Mrs. Weizmann at the Weizmann Institute for a luncheon and closed their symposium at Haifa with a discussion of a future aid zone program to be submitted to their sponsoring United Nations agency.

Dr. Weizmann, in a message read by Dr. Leo Kohn, adviser to the President, stated that "Jewish colonization in this country represented the first attempt to stem the inroad of the desert by planned effort."

United States scientists at the conference are Dr. L. A. Richards, head of the United States Salinity Laboratory; Dr. C. W. Thornwaite of Johns Hopkins University Laboratory of Climatology; Prof. F. W. Weten of the California Institute of Technology; Dr. C. E. Kellogg, chief of the Division of Soil Survey, United States Department of Agriculture; Prof. J. B. Leighly of the Department of Geography, University of California and Prof. P. Meigs of the International Geographical Union.

Prof. Samuel Bamberger, Israeli Scientific Council head and chairman of the seven-day conference, seeking to transform the world's deserts into arable farmland, said mankind faced starvation unless science could provide food for an ever-increasing population, reports the New York Times.

Although the scientists are concerned with the problem on a universal scale, Israel, attempting to coax food from her southern deserts to support more and more immigrants, considers it a vital question even in the short run. Units of Israeli pioneers dot these dusty tracts, forcing crops of sorghum, corn and truck produce out of the soil. Others clear the fields of countless rocks, dig irrigation canals and cart water to the community.

Talks On Repayment To Begin Again

An official spokesman said that the West German Government was willing to make a concrete offer to Israel in response to a vote by the Israeli Parliament that negotiations for the $1,000,000,000 reparations sought by Israel remain suspended until such an offer was made.

This has been the intention of the Bonn Government all along, the spokesman asserted, adding that this attitude was indicated to the Israeli Government and the Jewish Conference on Material Claims when talks at The Hague were broken off April 10.

At that time the Israeli Government walked out of the negotiations because the Bonn Government had offered $750,000,000 in payment for the settlement of Jewish refugees in Israel and, when Israel found this unacceptable, linked the payment of this amount with the formula for the payment of Germany's external debts being worked out at the international conference in London.

Herrman J. Abs, who is head of the West German delegation at the London conference, which is scheduled to be resumed May 10, and Prof. Franz Boehm, head of the Bonn delegation to The Hague reparations talks, were to confer.

In the meantime, however, the Israeli Parliament's action became a political issue at Bonn. Echoing the resolution in the Knesset (Israeli Parliament) Dr. Kurt Schumacher, leader of the powerful Social Democratic opposition, issued a statement demanding that the Bonn Government make "a concrete, satisfactory and serious" offer to Israel, reports the New York Times.

In addition, Dr. Schumacher challenged the Bonn Government's view that the Israeli reparations negotiations and the London conference on external debts were interdependent.

Herr Abs, before going into the conference with Professor Boehm, said in an interview that he and his German colleague were in full agreement, as was the Bonn Government, that claims by Israel and non-governmental Jewish groups were basically different, but he stressed that "something not generally understood, even by our own politicians, is that there is only one capacity to pay and only one technique for transferring funds."

Herr Abs said it was his firm belief that both problems, the settling of Germany's pre-war commercial debts and post-war reparations to Israel, would be satisfactorily solved "but they can only be solved together and if one fails the other will fail also."

Urges Three Faiths Denounce Anti-Semitism As Tactic In U.S. Election

The executive branch of the American Jewish Committee called on the three major religious faiths for a unified condemnation of racial and religious bigotry in the current Presidential campaign, as the executive group ended its two-day semi-annual meeting at the Savoy-Plaza Hotel, in New York.

A report unanimously adopted by the executive branch noted that the Presidential race had sparked anti-Semitic agitation, "which may penetrate into the broader areas of American life." The report, prepared by Samuel R. Feller of New York, chairman of the domestic affairs committee of the American Jewish Committee, held that on the basis "of evidence in our hands, the use of anti-Semitism as a political instrumentality is currently being stepped up significantly."

"It is vitally important," Mr. Feller said, "that the major Presidential candidates join with the religious leaders in unequivocally denouncing the support of hate merchants. If this is not done, it is quite possible that the 1952 Presidential election campaign may go down as one of the darkest blot on American history," reports the New York Times.

He maintained that in the current political campaign "anti-Semitism is especially prominent as a tactic used by organized professional hate-mongers, who have attacked one or two leading candidates in vicious gutter propaganda."

"These conspiracies," Mr. Feller added, "know no local boundaries. What was produced in California was distributed in New Hampshire's Presidential primaries. Literature published in Kansas is used in Texas. Material from Texas finds a marketplace in the Middle West and Far West. Some communities have literally been saturated with this poison."

Mr. Feller maintained that anti-Semitism today "has the status of a sort of an outlawed weapon in the political arsenal," and that "it is employed only when conventional weapons and tactics seem inadequate to assure victory, and then only by guerrilla forces not subject to direct control by high commands."

"Political manifestations of anti-Semitism," he continued, "have a delayed reaction. They are officially disclaimed and publicly condemned. But there is always present the possibility of a coalition of various anti-Semitic groups and certain other elements, whose main objectives may happen to coincide in some popular movement. We must be on constant guard against such a possibility."

Richard S. Zeisler announced that the next executive branch meeting would be held in Chicago on October 22-23, "at the same time as the meeting of the national commission of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith. Both groups will participate in the executive committee sessions of the Joint Defense Appeal, the fundraising arm of both the American Jewish Committee and the Anti-Defamation League."

BERNSTEIN TO DIRECT HIS NEW OPERA

The world premiere of Leonard Bernstein's new opera, "Trouble in Tahiti" will take place at the first annual Brandeis University Festival of Creative Arts, to be held from June 12 through June 15 at Waltham, Mass. Under the direction of composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein, who serves as Professor of Music at Brandeis and Director of the young University's School of Creative Arts, the four-day festival will present an integrated and sustained inquiry into the state of the creative arts in contemporary life.

"Trouble in Tahiti," Mr. Bernstein's new one-act opera, has been completed in order to receive its world premiere at the Festival. A domestic tragic-comedy with satiric overtones, the opera is Mr. Bernstein's first strictly operatic venture. As in his earlier works, "Fancy Free" and "On the Town," the new "Trouble in Tahiti" makes use of musical idiom which is distinctly American. It is Bernstein's first continuously sung musical dramatic work. The festival will be held in conjunction with the first Brandeis commencement, on June 16.

The festival will open with a symposium "An Inquiry into the Present State of Creative Arts," with Mr. Bernstein as Moderator. The majority of events will be held in the newly-constructed Ullman Amphitheatre, named for the donor, Adolph Ullman, of Boston. Four art films will be shown, discussed by Mitchell Siporin, Brandeis artist in residence. There

Are We Christians?

BY F. W. NORWOOD, OF MONTREAL, IN THE UNITED CHURCH OBSERVER, OF TORONTO

The following article is by the Reverend Dr. Norwood, who served as minister for seventeen years at City Temple, in London, England, and for a number of years at St. James United Church, in Montreal, and is now engaged in special work on behalf of the Church both in the United States and Canada.

In our city we have a place of worship that fills me with admiration and regard, but leaves behind it all a disturbing ripple of regret and an undercurrent of questioning.

It is a Liberal Hebrew Synagogue. In the more leisureed days of my retirement, I find myself going there rather frequently upon week-day occasions. I find there many things I miss in my own Communion.

The Rabbi has long been a member of a small ministerial group to which I belong. While we differ profoundly upon our belief in our Lord Christ, we are never embarrassed by his presence, and he is frequently most helpful. On no other issue do we radically differ. On a number of occasions I have spoken in the Synagogue as a Christian minister. In fellowship and in religious interest he is second to none. There are so many week-day occasions on which I listen to the most able and interesting speeches that I would be glad to hear given in our Christian Churches.

I am always impressed by the fine audiences of men and women—the more especially by the men, obviously business and professional, thoughtful or scholarly men, who are deeply interested. They are fine listeners. Before each person there are set two slips of paper, upon which they can write questions, which are quietly collected by ushers and presented to the speaker, who answers them.

They seem to have no inhibitions; any live subject interests them. I am sure I could state my full Christian position, and be listened to with respect and sympathy. Indeed that is done regularly at an Annual Conference to which Christian ministers are invited, and one of them is chosen to speak as he sees fit. Their general attitude toward Jesus is one of reverent respect. They think of Him as the flower of their race.

There is an air of reality about them. They give one a sense of history. Their history is a religious history. As a people tragedy has hit them hard, and still surrounds them. They count their recent dead by millions. Anti-Semitism is not for them a ghost that has been laid. They know that their tradition has made them a separated people. In their own lives they are conscious of it. Even yet, and even here.

They strike me as curiously humble in a dignified way—if that is not a contradiction. They find no room for easy optimism, but they do not yield to despair. They know that some of their people are tempted toward radical measures, but, as a race they are conservative. They use their brains more than most people. They would have perished otherwise. Wherever their brains may carry them, at least they will use them. Their traditional training has ensured that. But these people are using theirs for religion, for world understanding, and pre-eminently for peace.

I drop in at odd times to see my friend the Rabbi, or to attend some interesting gathering. The place is always thronging; things are going on, smoothly and ef-

Woman Was Expert On Desertions

Mrs. Bessie Hamburger, seventy-two, lawyer and former Assistant Corporation Counsel of New York City, died at Atlantic City, N. J., while on visit. She lived at 22 West 134 Street, New York. Mrs. Hamburger was born in New York and educated at New York University Law School. She practiced as a volunteer for the Legal Aid Society and then established a private law firm with her husband, Jacob Hamburger, at 1775 Broadway. A son, Bert Hamburger, later joined the firm.

Mrs. Hamburger was assigned to the Domestic Relations court as Assistant Corporation Counsel in 1924, and served there eleven years, becoming an expert on desertion cases. She attributed most desertions to one of a few causes: economic maladjustment, poor health, lack of religious training, love of pleasure or lack of serious preparation for marriage. She served on the National Desertion Bureau of the Federation of Jewish Charities.

In 1936, she joined the staff of District Attorney William C. Dodge, where she was in charge of abandonment division. She also worked on the legal staff of the United Nations Secretariat. Mrs. Hamburger considered herself a "social doctor" and tried to effect reconciliation wherever possible in the cases she handled. Some husbands, however, resisted treatment. "I've known some who disappeared as many as nine times," she once said. "There's not much any one can do then."

She was a past matron of the Order of the American Women's Voluntary Services and the National Women Lawyers Association.

Ivan Mestrovic, the sculptor, has turned over to the State of Israel his two-ton marble statue of Moses, prophet and savior of the Jewish people. Although self-exiled from his homeland, Mr. Mestrovic made his gift through efficiently. I never am embarrassed as a Christian minister among these Hebrew people.

But my purpose just now is not to write a eulogy of this synagogue. I am, of course, most deeply concerned with my own communion, and, alas, with my own disturbing comparisons. Here are some of them.

I go to the Churches of my own order on stated occasions. I never think of "dropping in." I only see my brother-ministers on stated occasions. I do not know the real minds of most of them. We are like each other, but, as a rule, in absence. We hear each other "speak" but seldom chat. We get to know the groups of devoted women who meet so regularly, and the young people whom the Church is "keeping hold of." And there are always some faithful officers.

But the men? You see them at morning service, more or less, and they seem to be doing "the right thing." But do you know anyone more uncomfortable looking than the average man at a weekday meeting at the Church? How often do you see them wrangling together over the huge problems that confront religion in the world of today? Are they really interested? If so, they seem to exercise their interest outside rather than inside the Church.

the Yugoslav Communist Government "in deep appreciation of the contribution which the Jewish people have made directly or indirectly to human civilization." New living in Syracuse, N. Y.

Mr. Mestrovic is currently working on a sculpture to be erected during next year in Riverside Park, New York City, as a memorial to the Jewish people who died during World War II.

A newly established thirty man medical council which will determine the nutritional effect of Israel's rationing system held its first meeting in Jerusalem last week. Three working committees were set up to study the nutritional value of present rations, the quality of manufactured foodstuffs, and food hygiene. A slight increase in food consumption during February was revealed, but reduced fish and cheese supplies caused the calorie consumption level to fall below standard. In Jerusalem it was announced that the arrival of additional shipments of potatoes would ensure a six pound monthly distribution of the item for each person for the next five to six months. Yogurt and white cheese, both made of powdered milk, would remain rationed. Substantial imports of hard cheese should lower the cost of the item by June. The present fat and sugar ration remain unchanged, but the egg ration has dropped from four to three per person. Hundreds of thousands of eggs are exported each year to Switzerland to secure foreign exchange.

J.D.C. HELPS TO SET UP T.B. HOSPITAL

A new 80-bed children's tuberculosis hospital, was opened in Israel at what was formerly a training center for the Mufti's military forces, it was reported by the Joint Distribution Committee. The hospital, at Eitanim, in the Jerusalem hills, represents a co-operative venture, with funds and equipment being provided by the Danish Government, the Israeli Health Ministry, and JDC's Malben program on behalf of aged, ill and handicapped newcomers to the Jewish state. The hospital was dedicated to Denmark's late King Christian X. Danish Minister to Israel Hans Four Hoffmeyer participated. Malben, whose patients will occupy 50 percent of the beds in the new institution contributed the greater part of the funds for the conversion of the buildings, and for the addition of a second story. The hospital, is to be operated by the Israeli Health Ministry. A marble plaque was affixed in the entrance hall recalling Malben's contributions. Speakers stressed Malben's aid, not only to the new children's TB institution, but generally, in relieving the Government of Israel from the tremendous burdens of caring for "hard core" newcomers to the Jewish state.

The new hospital stands in one of the most beautiful spots in the Holy Land, overlooking the wide mountain ranges of the Jerusalem corridor. An annex for adult tuberculars is now being added on the hilltop. Prefabricated houses, partly financed by Malben, have already been erected on the slope as living quarters for the hospital staff. Most of the staff members are themselves former tuberculars. Eitanim is one of 16 Israeli hospitals in which Malben is placing TB cases, in addition to four hospitals under Malben auspices. Malben is today caring for nearly 1,000 tubercular men, women and children, or more than 70 percent of the total number of TB's in Israel. Largest TB in-

mustardone cup raw potatoes
four tablespoons fat
one onion
two cups tomato juice
one-half cup carrots
two tablespoons flour

Cut steak in serving cubes. Measure flour, salt and seasoning, and pour into a paper bag. Add cubed steak, and shake well until all meat is coated with flour. Heat fat in a heavy sauce-pan. Add the meat, and cook and stir until meat is well-seared all over. Add sliced onion; lower heat, and add some of the tomato juice. Cover tightly, and simmer until almost tender, about one and one-half hours. Add the rest of the tomato juice from time to time as needed. After cooking meat for about one hour, add the diced raw carrots and cubed potatoes. When tender, pour meat mixture into individual casseroles, or into one large casserole. Cover with plain pastry topping; and bake in a hot oven, until golden brown. This makes five servings. For the topping, melt down three tablespoons of prepared cooking shortening; add a pinch of salt, and one-quarter cup hot water. Add as much flour as is needed to make the dough easy to roll out. Any pie-crust dough may be used instead of this.

Establish First Cantors Institute

Alan M. Stroock, chairman of the Board of Directors of The Jewish Theological Seminary of America, has announced the establishment of The Cantors Institute of the Seminary, to be inaugurated in October, 1952, as the first degree-granting institution of higher Jewish music to be founded in America. The Cantors Institute will offer a six-year course leading to the degree of Bachelor of Sacred Music. Students who are admitted will be required to take courses in a recognized school of music, as well as courses in basic Jewish texts at the Seminary College of Jewish Studies to supplement their special training in the art of cantorial music. Upon their completion of the six-year program, graduates of The Cantors Institute will be qualified to occupy posts as cantors and directors of music in synagogues throughout the country. Dr. Max J. Routenberg, executive vice-president of the Seminary, will serve as director of The Cantors Institute. Formerly executive vice-president of the Rabbinical Assembly of America, he was appointed Senior Chaplain for the Jewish forces of the United States Army in the United Kingdom during World War II, holding the rank of Major. He is lecturer in Synagogue Education and Administration at The Teachers Institute of the Seminary.

Dr. Hugo Weisgall, composer and conductor, son of Cantor Adolph Weisgall, of Baltimore, Md., has been appointed chairman of the faculty of The Cantors Institute. He received his early musical training at Peabody Conservatory, in Baltimore, and the Curtis Institute, in Philadelphia, and took his doctorate at Johns Hopkins University, in Baltimore. He is director of the Hilltop Musical Company, lecturer at Johns Hopkins University, and choral director of the Chisuk Amuno Congregation, in Baltimore. He is the composer of several musical works, including the one-act opera, "The Tenor", Columbia University restitution in Israel, and in the entire Near East, will be Malben's 500-bed TB hospital at Be'er Yaacov, which is already functioning at about half its final capacity, and which will be completed this year with funds from the United Jewish Appeal.

A new method of familiarizing pupils with Israel folk tunes while teaching them to play a musical instrument is introduced in "Hava Nehalala," a text-book on the elements of halilit (recorder) playing by Tziporah Jochsberger, published by the World Zionist Organization. The book contains the notes and texts of a large variety of Israel songs as well as instructions in playing the halilit, a flute-like wood-wind instrument popular in Israel. Miss Jochsberger, the author of the book, who was a member of the faculty of the New Jerusalem Conservatory and Academy of Music where she taught piano and the halilit, is conducting courses in New York and Philadelphia for instructors in the halilit, auspices of the World Zionist Organization.

Mix and sift once, then sift into a bowl, 2 c. one-sifted pastry flour (or 1 1/4 c. one-sifted hard-wheat flour), 3 tps. Magic Baking Powder, 1/4 tsp. salt and 1/4 c. fine granulated sugar. Cut in finely 4 lbs. chilled shortening. Combine 1 well-beaten egg, 1/4 c. milk and 1/4 tsp. vanilla. Cream together 1 1/4 tbs. soft butter or margarine, 1/4 c. lightly-packed brown sugar, 1/4 tsp. grated orange rind and 1/4 tsp. ground cinnamon. In addition, many would now welcome an indefinite postponement of Israeli and nongovernmental Jewish reparations at the time when they are being called upon to make vast outlays for the European Defense Community and the settlement of external debts.

Most observers agree Israel would have been far more successful in her approach for reparations if she had initiated it two years ago. At that time Israel might have obtained suitable financial commitments that the Allies might have been prepared to support. As it is, reliable sources disclose, only the United States has displayed more than a casual interest in the subject.

The United States' informal intervention on behalf of Jewish organizations resulted in satisfactory preliminary agreements between the Jewish Conference on Material Claims and the Bonn Government. However, United States officials have been impressed by the complaint of the Germans that, granting the Israeli claims are not based on Hitler Germany's crimes against the Jews, which can never be paid off, a payment for material costs in resettling Jews should have some relation to other German financial debts.

Personal Planning HELPED US
SAVE...

That's what Pete Near and his wife will be saying within a month! All because one morning — a little over a year ago — he asked for a brand-new booklet at the Bank of Montreal. That little book contained answers to many financial problems which had been bothering them.

It showed them, for one thing, how to get more value out of their income... how to work out a personal plan which put them in complete control of their money. By following this personal plan, they found they could meet high prices on their present income and still save for such good things as repainting and freshening up the home.

The name of the booklet Pete asked for is "Personal Planning". It can help you, too — show you how to "clean up" money in your savings account at the end of the month. Why not make a real break now. Pick up your copy today, open an account and start saving in this scientific but entirely personal way! You'll be surprised and pleased with the results.

The Understanding Heart

Text: 1 Kings III: 1-15

The wisest of men, Solomon, so Scripture relates, wished for, above all else in life, "an understanding heart." That wish pleased God. Opposed to the understanding heart of a Solomon is the hardening heart of Pharaoh.

The understanding heart is characterized by the virtue of a sympathetic imagination. By that we mean the ability to put ourselves in place of others and to share their experience with discerning sympathy. Truly, to judge rightly our neighbour we must possess the understanding heart. Lacking the understanding heart we often deal a cruel blow to neighbourliness by misjudging and placing a false interpretation upon the lives of others. Long ago one of the greatest of talmudic sages proclaimed: "Pass not judgment upon thy neighbour until thou art come into his place."

All of us instinctively long to have our lives properly evaluated. It is incumbent, therefore, upon us to enlarge our sympathies and widen and deepen our insight early. This means the urgency for the cultivation of a finer sensitiveness towards others.

Those of us, therefore, who have lived through trial and sorrow can know the art of comforting others at a time when they are experiencing trial and tribulation. Much need not be said in words to the afflicted by one who has known affliction. The quiet grasp of the hand speaks most eloquently, for this hand belongs to one possessed of the understanding heart. Therefore, in the delicate task of comforting, the understanding heart on the part of the comforter is a primary factor. Otherwise, mere words of sympathy yield very little in the hour of tragic affliction.

We are living in an hour of history wherein sympathetic imagination seems altogether absent. There is so much cruelty and hard-heartedness, and unspeakable greed and selfishness are so marked in man's relations with fellow man. While science has forced people into a physical proximity, spiritual proximity has not increased and without an increased spirit of sympathy the life of mankind will not rise to heights of nobility and humanitarianism. Our social problems depend on the growth of social imagination and sympathetic understanding.

The prophet, the teacher, the reformer, men who have sought for the triumph of the ideal, these have ever identified themselves with the sorrows of others. Such men of understanding heart choose to stand on the side of those who are wronged or dealt with unjustly. An Abraham Lincoln, witnessing the degradation of Negro slaves, resolves to fight slavery and remove this terrible sin from the life of his beloved nation. A Henrietta Szold, at the age of eighty, feeling the misery of persecuted childhood, rededicates herself anew in the work of Youth Aliyah and becomes the dominant person in rescuing thousands of mere boys and girls from the hell of totalitarianized Europe.

Among every people, social reform is made possible by those blessed ones who are possessed of the understanding heart. Concerning the understanding heart's identification with the perplexities of others, Scripture well records the assertion of Ezekiel, "I sat where they sat." He chose for seven days to sit in Babylon by the River Chabar with the distressed Jewish exiles in order to be of comfort to them. (Ezekiel 3:15.)

The hope for mankind, the wave of the future, is to be found in the understanding heart. Religion, great religion, has always had as one of its major functions the cultivation of the understanding heart. For out of the heart do come the issues of life.

Whither Germany?

The young Federal Republic of Germany is not separated from the rest of the western world by an Iron Curtain. Rather on the contrary, Western Germany poses willingly for the search-lights directed towards her. Books and articles on happenings and developments inside Germany are being mass-produced. Facts and figures are readily available. The result? We know fairly well what is going on inside Germany; we know very little of what is going on inside the Germans.

The writer has comparatively wide opportunities of conversing and corresponding with people who visited the country in recent years and months — people who are in a position to observe and judge. Their impressions are incredibly conflicting. Within one week I spoke to two (non-Jewish) persons who had spent a considerable time in Germany. The one who had been there over a year assured me that in all that time during which he had close contacts particularly with university students, he had not discovered a trace of Nazism and anti-Semitism; the other, a business man, found the whole atmosphere almost indistinguishable from that of the early thirties. These are extreme cases, but also among less optimistic and pessimistic observers there is a wide difference of opinion.

In these circumstances, a careful and unprejudiced examination of the stability of the democratic fabric of post-war Germany, the extent of the continuing permeation with the Hitler views, the significance of neo-Nazi and ex-soldiers' organizations, and the strength of the Democratic and anti-Democratic forces is highly welcome. A publication by the Anglo-Jewish Association discusses these and other questions in a most comprehensive and informative booklet, "Germany's New Nazis."

The material assembled explains to some extent the conflicting reports. West Germany is today a country of contradictions. She is, moreover, a country in flux, a nation vacillating between confident hopes and cynical scepticism, and composed, as any other people, of all types of character and lack thereof, of every variety of intellect, experience and interests. "The German," if he ever has existed, no longer exists; there is no common denominator for the individuals and groups. That, after all, is perhaps not surprising. Typification is always rather dangerous and misleading. The little volume under review avoids cheap generalizations.

Particular interest attaches to the well-documented survey of the various neo-Nazi organizations ranging from the formidable Socialist Reich Party, an efficient vote-gathering machine, appealing to nationalist instincts and Nazi sentiments, to the hundreds of small Right radical and extreme nationalist groups, many of them certainly without significance and future. But then, thirty years ago Hitler's semi-obscure half-dozen followers seemed similarly insignificant. What is frightening, is not that Nazis have not completely disappeared, but, that, after first going into hiding, and then cautiously and defensively exploring the terrain, they are now again taking the offensive. They are scenting the morning air.

While this threat is an open and, therefore, less dangerous one, a very serious view must be taken of the "Trojan Horses," the infiltration of former Nazis into high grades of the Civil Service and the Foreign Office. In this respect, Dr. Adenauer's vigilance is open to serious criticism. The parties who voice such criticism are themselves not free of blame; not only those of the Right fail to ask many questions of alleged converts to democracy.

On the whole, however, the democratic forces are on the qui vive. The trade unions, the two major parties, the churches and religious organizations, the overwhelming majority of newspapers, the apparatus of education (with hitherto unsatisfactory results) and such leaders as Professor Heuss, Dr. Adenauer and Dr. Schumacher are given due credit. This is only fair, but it is also to recall that twenty years ago the same forces enjoyed the full confidence of the Democrats inside and outside Germany.

The picture which emerges from the study is, in the words of the author or authors, "of a fundamentally healthy political, economic and social structure which, nevertheless, is far from being completely stable." This "on the one side—on the other side" is probably for the time being the only valid and fair judgment. It is repeated again and again.

"There is no doubt that Nazi beliefs and habits of mind have survived the collapse of Hitler's Third Reich. Equally, the unprejudiced observer cannot but be struck by the extent to which Right-wing extremism has developed once again into a serious political force. There is considerable evidence that Nazism and extreme nationalism have even survived in quarters which are ostensibly democratic... Opposed to these dangerous factions and currents is the main stream of West German Democratic life. Backed by the considerable forces of the rejuvenated German trades union movement, there are elements which recognise both the evil and insanity of the Nazi record and are constantly on guard against any signs of an attempt to recreate a Fourth Reich... This is a factor to be kept in mind by those in the West who sometimes tend to lump all Germans together as unregenerate and hopelessly infected with the seeds of Nazism."

The impression of this remarkably frank and fair survey is that there is no reason either for complacency or for despondency. The internal threat from the neo-Nazis seems more acute than the external one from the Communists, and is increased by the tendency of the West to regard Rightists even of the radical variety as allies against Communism which, in all experience, is a more than doubtful speculation. That is an additional reason to think again before re-arming the Germans; the arms may well fall into hands which will not make the expected use of them.
